

"The innovative ideas and extensive experience the Forrer team brought to the table helped transform our office into a comfortable and creative environment for our very diverse workforce. With Forrer's insight, we were able to develop a design solution that really works for us, and the results speak for themselves"

– Phil Estes, CEO
Vesta, Inc.

Vesta

Vesta, a global leader in contract medical device manufacturing, was expanding their Milwaukee headquarters location in order to accommodate growth and better serve the needs of their diverse workforce.

As part of the facility expansion project, Vesta wanted to update their office space to attract younger talent and more accurately reflect their brand. The original office was very traditional, from the furniture style to the color palette. Vesta wanted the new space to be inspiring, collaborative and to project their corporate culture and brand from the inside out by integrating the official company color into the design.

Forrer worked with Stephen Perry Smith Architects from the initial design phase through to completion. By exploring many product options, color schemes and designs, Forrer was able to help Vesta select a creative, modern solution that accomplished their goals for the space without pushing the envelope too far.

The end result is a stylish, forward-thinking and functional office environment that expresses Vesta's corporate culture, helps attract and retain talented workers and gives visitors a great first impression.
